WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

Cold overnight temperatures will continue tonight for the Northern California interior. Tonight night will be the coldest, with near-freezing temperatures across the Valley, and teens and single digits over the higher terrain. Freeze Watches and Warnings has been issued to highlight these concerns.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

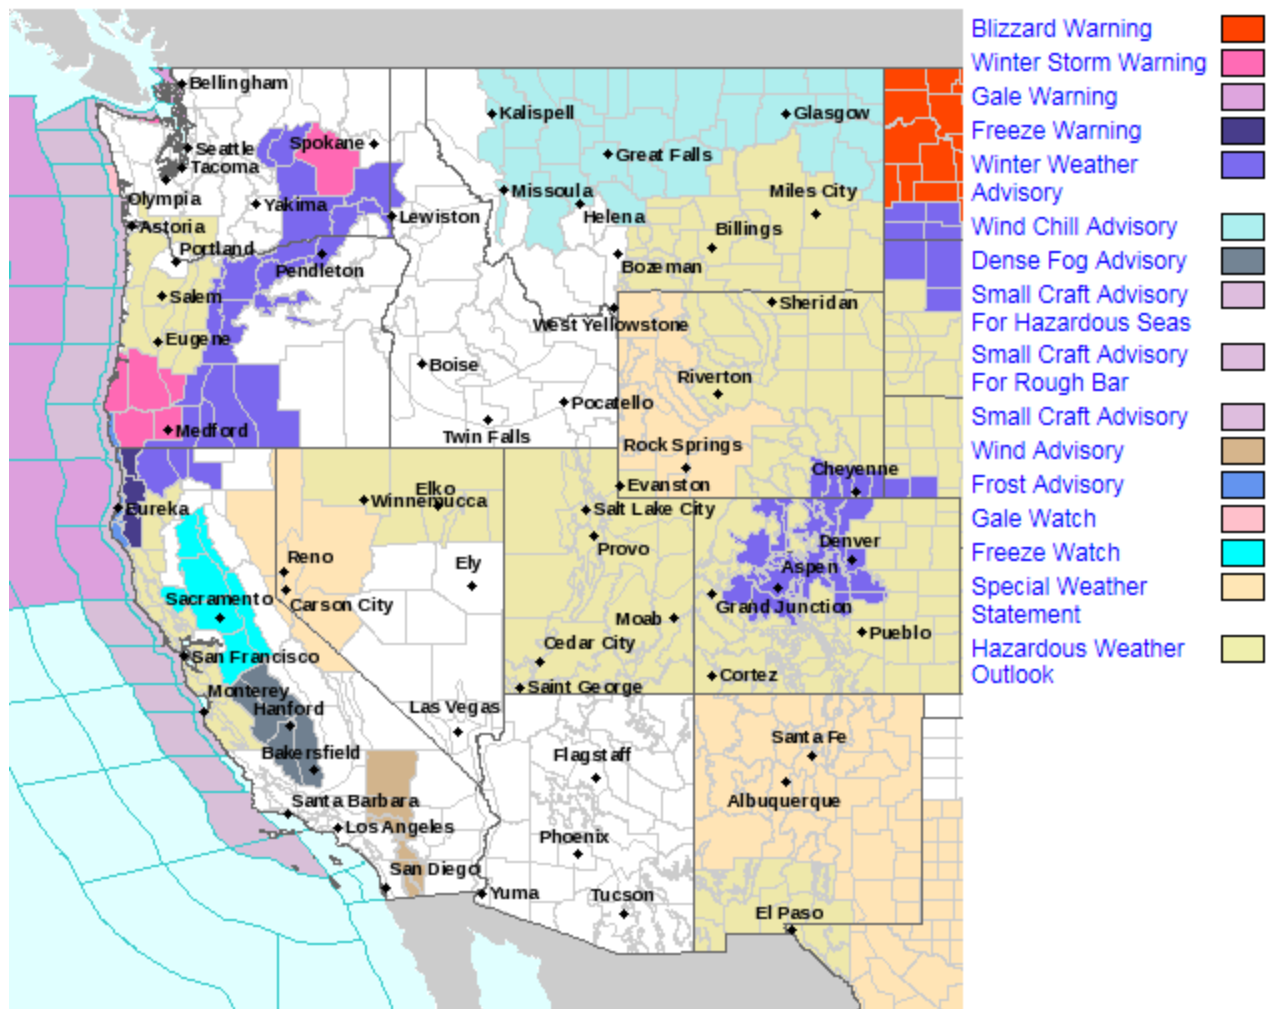

Over the next few days, a rather cold air mass will be moving into the region. Some light precipitation is expected in most areas from a weather system moving across the region tonight and Tuesday. Snow levels will become quite low, possibly as low as 1500 feet in the northwest areas. Clearing later Tuesday will help overnight lows drop to the lowest readings in some time with single digits expected especially for the mountain valleys. A stronger weather system will move into the region later Wednesday with warmer temperatures (somewhat higher snow levels) and a mix of precipitation types across the Geographic Area. There will be a chance of areas of freezing rain Wednesday night and Thursday before the coldest air that becomes trapped in valleys and drainages has a chance to moderate. Some gusty northerly winds are expected over the next few days, then some gusty southerly winds will develop later this week with the incoming weather system. Somewhat drier weather will be arriving later in the weekend, but another wet weather system appears likely to arrive early next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A trough dropping into the Great Basin from the Pacific Northwest will bring cooler temperatures and higher humidity to the region through Tuesday. Maximum temperatures will be in the mid 40s to mid 50s across the mountains and upper 50s and 60s in the valleys today, with upper 30s and 40s across the mountains and mid 50s to mid 60s in the valley Tuesday. Minimum humidity will be above 20% today and above 30% Tuesday away from the deserts. This trough will also bring westerly winds of 15 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph to the wind prone mountain and desert areas Tuesday. A weak ridge of high pressure will build into California from the Pacific Ocean bringing a little warmer and drier conditions to the area Wednesday and Thursday. Zonal flow will bring near to a little below normal temperatures and fairly high humidity to the region Friday through this weekend. Showers will occur from a Monterey/Fresno County line northward Thursday night through this weekend. Westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the mountain ridges and desert passes Friday afternoon through this weekend.
